Travelling around Wales

An important factor in holiday planning these days is value for money- and Wales can offer that. Due to its size and location, you can make cuts in your travelling costs. With excellent motorway links to the border and an extensive road network, your journey will be simple. Motorists never need to hesitate to leave the main routes because even the country roads are in a good condition – and they take you to places many people miss. As in the rest of Britain, you drive on the left of the road and distances and speed limits on road signs are given in miles. If you travel by rail, a good bargain is the Freedom of Wales ticket, which gives you one week's unlimited British rail travel anywhere in Wales during the period March-October inclusive.

Where to stay in Wales

If you choose to stay on a farm, forget the images of water from the well and toilets at the bottom of the garden. Welsh farm houses are old buildings equipped with every comfort. Wherever you, you'll experience excellent home cooking – and most farms offer special midweek or weekend rates during the low season and some will give reductions for children. In the country towns and villages you'll find cosy inns which have been welcoming travellers for centuries. There is no better place for getting to know the local inhabitants than the bar of an old inn, where everyone is ready to talk to everyone else. Go along to the bar for a lunchtime or evening glass of beer and you'll find yourself among friendly people. Note that in certain districts of Wales alcoholic drinks are not served on Sundays except in hotels and inns to people who live in the town or village and their guests.

27. To travel to Wales is ...

- a) easy because of its small size
- b) expensive but it's worth the money
- c) not expensive.

28. Which statement is true?

- a) In the rest of Britain you drive on the rest of the road unlike in Wales.
- b) Country roads take you to places that many fail to discover while in Wales.
- c) Country roads are in a bad condition in Wales.

29. If you choose to stay on a farm, you ...

- a) will find the toilet at the bottom of the garden.
- b) will find yourself in a building with little comfort.
- c) will stay at an old building with modern comfort.

30. Which statement is true?

- a) Farmhouses provide traditional, home-made food.
- b) Good home cooking is only provided at some places.
- c) Special rates are usually available in the high season.

31. On Sundays, alcoholic drinks are ...

- a) not served in the whole of Wales.
- b) not served in parts of Wales except in hotels and inns to residents and their visitors.
- c) are served in parts of Wales except for hotels and inns to residents and their guests.
